The New York Me ical Journal recently published an interesting item on mineral waters. It seems that the lay public is likely to confound table waters with medicinal waters containing active chemical substances; which cannot safely be included as part of the ordinary daily diet. The article says that greater attention is being directed to dietetic waters more generally called table waters, which, if pure, are of great value as hygienic agents, and it recommends waters like Apollinaria, which is re-

On the 18th February, at St. Saviour's, South Hamostead, N. W., by the Rev. G. C. Herklots, vicar, assisted by the Rev. F. W. Thorne, rector of Holy RICHARDS, of Foodhow, China, to Ligian Annie. eldest daughter of the late GEORGE WEBE, of Hen-

Hongrong, March 25th, 1893.

Mr. Francis carried the meeting of the "Odd Volumes" with him on Thursday in his resolution that what Hongkong most majority in favour of that want over the want of educational reform was not large one. In his opening remarks the learned gentleman said they were not there to discuss the particular lines on which existing defects in the Government might be amended, but from the furious onslaught be made on the constitution of the Legislative Council it would seem that it is in that direction he thinks reform ought to be introduced. His whole speech was directed to demonstrating the uselessness of the Legislative Council as a liberative or legislative assembly, but the attack rested to a large extent on exaggeration and imagination. Officials are not naturally born with a larger tincture of original sin than other men, nor are they so uninterested in their work as Mr. Francis represents. As the gardener takes a natural interest and pride in his garden, the engineer in his engine, the mercantile assistant in the prosperity of his firm, and the artist in his picture, so desire for the local control of purely we may assume the officials take an interest in the work of their particular departments and of the Government in in the hands of representatives elected by general. So far from its being the case that the official members of the Legislative Council are discouraged from taking an intelligent interest in the subjects brought before the Council not immediately affecting their own departments, they are specially inst. trained with that object in view, the cadets being first attached to the Colonial Secre- at 4,23 p.m. yesterday. tary's department so that they may acquire a general view of Governmental work and the flieshaus to select a suitable spot for a being afterwards attached first to one ide- lighthouse on those islands. partment and then to another before they settle down in a substantive appointment and finally attain the distinction of a seat in Council, and when Bills are being considered in Committee it is quite a common thing for official members and to be incorporated in the 29th inst. measures. Nor are the unofficial members so occasionally, on such questions as that of Shanghai. the military contribution, that the two sides are ranged in uncompromising opposition. Ordinarily great weight is attached to the pore. Mr. Wise takes up the appointment of views of the unofficial members, for even in is only on rare occasions that a measure animous opposition. And when this is the case there is nothing like the misapprehension at home as to the meaning of the vote that Mr. FRANCIS represents. The Secretary of State and all who are likely to take any interest in the affairs of the Colony know perfectly well what is meant when a Bill is carried solely by the official vote and are not at all liable to be misled as to the state of public feeling in the Colony. The unofficials being in a minority they can never force their will on the Government by sheer voting strength, but as counsellors and a lvisers they have the opportunity of exercising no inconsiderable power, a power which may be increased or lessened by their own discretion or indiscretion. We cannot agree it is far from being as bad as it is painted the doctor that Government in Hongkong must necessarily run on party lines. In a place like this, if anywhere, it ought to be possible to realise the ideal of the time when none was for a party and all were will improve. for the state."

The reform in the Government that we conceive to be necessary is the creation of a Municipal Council, not an attenuated little bumbledom arrangement, but a Council fully repesenting the intelligent public feeling of the Colony, including that of our Chinese fellow subjects, and endowed with full inrisdiction. Giving the Governor and his official advisers credit for the best intentions in the world, the present system must be the full amount allowed for Packages and Emp. | confessed to be altogether unsuitable for the municipal regulation of the place. When Counterfoil Order Books supplied free on ap. Governor DES Vœux gave his sanction to the adoption of the electric light and incurred expenditure in connection therewith without waiting for the approval of the Colonial Office he was severely rebuked for it. Now if the Colony chooses Governor-General gave a dinner to Admiral to adopt the electric light, having to pay for it out of its own resources, in what their honour. Nevertheless, the spectacle of an Annamite Mandarin, who like a small Melchisedek is priest and king in his own place, and whose passion it is to adorn it with a nanoply of ecclesiastial fabrics, surmounted with the Cross of Christ, is sufficiently uncommon to deserves passing attention even in Europe. When the father dies, bis personal estate will probably pass to an adopted son, but it is anticipated that the Church, unwilling to forfeit so goodly an heritage, will put it a claim for the religious edifices; and what other destiny could profitably befall them it is difficult to conceive. In a neighbouring mansion Père VI. himself resides, and when he moves abroad is attended by the green umbrellas and the roofed hammock of the Annamite Mandarin. He also maintains an excellent guest-house for the entertainment of such visitors as make their way to Phat Diem, and there I sujoyed his hospitality. A limited conversational intercourse is possible to a European who is no too far removed from his scholastic days to mu able a little Latin; for this is the ecclesias. tical tongue of the Annamite priesthood What the Pere styles his curriculum turns out to be the jinrikishs of Japan; his spelunca, of which he is particularly proud, is a grotto which he has constructed of blocks of stone, wherein a tunnel-like passage winds about in the interior of a menticule of artificial rockwork. For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pagin enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans, residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. A MILLIONAIRE'S GRAVE," &C., &C. CHAPTER XXXIX

"I HAVE A WARRANT FOR YOUR ARREST." It was very early that summer's morning when Weebs gently opened the door of Rose's bed-chamber, and stole into her room. The sun had not risen, the birds themselves were not long awake, the bickering sparrows that hopped around the bilcony, the silent swallows that went darting to and fro in the air, and the blackbird that somewhere down youder among the trees in the square sung his mellow flute-like loveful song. Weebs stood for just a moment by the window that had been thrown open by Ross, ere lying ! down, that the bright moonbeams might flood the room, and that she might catch the sweet breath of a light south wind that blew balmily from across the water. Rose loved the south wind above all winds that could blow. It seemed who lived so far far away, youder, in that green lagoon in a sunny sea.

The morning haze had already lifted off the water, where many a bark lay moored, and was gonden and crimson clouds lay in streams athwart to commission of a diabolical murder.

But Weebs turned away at last, turned away with a sigh and advanced towards the bed. She had come to look at her younger "baby." as she proudly called her, to kiss her hair, and bid her good-bye as she slept. She knelt down by the bed and gazed on the girl long and earnestly, and with as much fondness as ever mother watched her sleeping child.

It was the desire, how he wakes—stirs—he will struggle. Swift as the a fit of weeping. It lasts but a short time, however. She raises herself once more, and dries believed hung over her, that instigated Winnie's Now I fly. I am as one deranged. I am her tears with her robe. Whispering a few fond words in her own tongue, she bends over the sleeping girl now and kisses her hands and her hair, then, rising, The door closes silently behind her, but in a moment more it is re-opened and Weeba is there again. It seems as if she lacks the courage to tear herself away. A sigh that is almost a suppressed cry of anguish escapes her at last, and now-she is gone. Several weeks before this, Winnie was sitting was regiming to deepen into night. Winnie rose quickly and sprang towards him. "You bring news of my husband or my child? O, speak quickly, sir. Are they ill?" I do not nome from your husband, madam, said the stranger, in low and sorrowful voice. "Come, you must be brave, and try to bear up against the grief I must bring you. I have here a warrant for your arrest."

"Warrant? Arrest ?" said Winnie, wonderingly. " Have you not made some strange mistake, sir! This is Captain Gregory's house. I am Mrs. Gregory---"Alas! no, madam, it is my very pointed duty to arrest you on a warrant charging you with the murder of Frederick Wallard. "I murder-I--" "Hush! dear lady. I must beg of you to say "O, Grysie," oried Winnie to the faithful old servant who had come wonderingly into the room. She could say no more, but fainted in Grysie's As quickly as he could the officer explained nor feel half its poignancy. Even when she awoke next day in prison, and got rid of the sensation that it was all a frightful dream. Winnie could not ball realise the terribleness of her situation. She felt dazed and stupefied, and if she thought at all it was to wonder what the evidence would be that would be adduced at the trial. The trial was very soon to take place, for the Assizes were held early that year in the Granite City, and the other cases were but simple, so that all public interest centred for the time being in

So days and weeks went by, but Winnie had never quite shaken off the first stunning shock of her arrest. So strange an effect had this upon her, that she did not feel as if it were she herself who was about to be arraigned before the judge for the crime of murder. No, it was someone else, someone in whom she took the most intense interest, someone on whose behali she felt exceedingly thankful that husband and daughter had not yet returned from sea, and that case now before your lordship." it would be all over, for good or for ovil, long before they came back, that either the col grave would be closed over someone ere then, or that someone would be free to welcome them back, and that then the dear, happy old life would recommence. It was not until the eventful day, not until she found herself in dock, the unhappy cyncsure of all eyes, that the whole horror of her position swept over her as foaming waves sweep over the vision of a drowning man. A grey blue mist appeared to rise between her and the sea of faces turned towards the dock; bells seemed to ring in her ears, then all was for a time forgotten. Winnie had fainted. When she recovered sufficiently to plead, which she did in tones barely audible, she was allowed to be seated and the case proceeded. A very reverent looking man was the advocate who conducted the prosportion, but bitterly cruel to Winnie's ears seemed every word that fell from his lips. Never before perhaps was advocate or solicitor so sure of the rights of his case. "Never before," he said in his apsech. " was a case more plain; more easily sifted or read. Painful indeed was it, he willingly admitted, to see a lady like the accused in so awful a position, and yet he doubted not that the jury would consider the evidence he would bring before them, untrammelled by any thoughts save a stern and manly wish to do justice.
